

STATE HIGHWAY MEN IN THE CITY

Two Members of State Highway Commission Inspect Roads Chosen for East and West Route.

MET BY GOOD ROADS BOOSTERS

Members of Jackson County Organization Accompany Commissioners to French Lick Via Bedford.

L. F. Wright, of Columbus, and Louis Taylor, of Newburg, Indiana, members of the Indiana State Highway Commission, passed over the roads chosen in Jackson county for the east and west highway across the state today. The commissioners were met at Mr. Wright's farm in Bartholomew county by T. S. Blish, president of the Jackson County Motor Club, J. H. Andrews and Senator Edward P. Elsner, of this city, Dr. S. W. Shields, of Brownstown, O. W. Ernest, of Medora and the county commissioners, J. W. Loudon, of Clearspring, John W. Beikman, of Brownstown, and Dan Walker of Cortland, and escorted to this city. The commissioners and road boosters arrived in the city shortly before noon and the visitors were entertained at luncheon at the home of T. S. Blish. At 1 o'clock the boosters, left for Brownstown where they were met by a large delegation and escorted over the remainder of the trip through the county via Valonia and Medora. The highway commissioners were accompanied by W. S. More and W. H. Rights, state highway engineers. The latter is well known in this city having until a few months ago served as city engineer. Senator Lands, J. M. Wells, and Mr. Owens, of Bedford, met the highway men here and will escort them to the Lawrence county seat in hopes SIM BRYANT ACCUSED OF THEFT OF CHICKENS AND CORN Farmers Identify Property Found in Possession of Local Man Early Today.

Sim Bryant was taken into custody by Officers Russell and Sensback about 2 o'clock this morning as he drove into the city with five or six bushels of corn and some chickens, and a charge of grand larceny will be placed against him. Bryant is being held at the city jail and will probably not be given a hearing until Friday morning. The officers in making their rounds early this morning happened in the vicinity of West Second street when they heard the sounds of a wagon approaching. They waited for its arrival and discovered that the driver was Sim Bryant and the wagon was loaded with several sacks of corn and a box containing several young chickens. They stopped the driver and asked him where he had got the corn and when he refused to talk, brought him to the city jail. Officers Russell and Sensback then started out to trace the wagon and woke up several farmers west of the city. The farmers proceeded to follow up the trail and the officers returned to the city. Several farmers were called by telephone and it was finally learned that a corn crib at the home of Mrs. Anna Koop, who resides about four miles northwest of the city had been broken open and several bushels of corn taken. She also missed some chickens and came to this city early this morning and identified the chickens found in Bryant's possession as belonging to her. Bryant has been implicated in similar cases before and the police believe that they have got enough evidence to convict him this time of grand larceny. He has refused to talk much about where he got the corn and chickens early this morning. Farmers west of the city have been missing corn, chickens and other valuables for several months past and are making an effort to apprehend the thieves who are raiding their corn cribs and chicken coops. They will work hard to convict Bryant who is believed to have been implicated in several different raids on corn cribs in that section.

ODD FELLOWS WILL GO TO LOUISVILLE

Thousands of Lodge Members will Attend Sovereign Grand Lodge Convention There Sept. 15-22.

GIGANTIC PARADE SEPT. 19

Plans are Underway to Entertain Visitors Who will Come from Many States to Attend.

That thousands of members of the order of Odd Fellows will attend the international convention of the Sovereign Grand Lodge to be held at Louisville September 15-22 is forecast by the heavy reservation of accommodations at the leading Louisville hotels. The delegates representing the Patriarchs Militant will have headquarters at the hotel Henry Waterson and the delegates from the Rebekah Assembly will put up at the Tyler house. Seymour will be represented at the international meeting as many members of the local order will attend besides the special appointed delegates. The convention promises to be the biggest secret order affair held in Louisville since the Shriners meeting several years ago. Many plans are being carried out in preparing for the entertainment of the hundreds of visitors who will be present together with several contests. W. B. Harris, of Morganfield, Ky., has been placed in charge of the contests and will go to Louisville several days before the meeting convenes to complete all arrangements governing same. At present only twenty-three lodges have signified their intentions of entering the contests but it is expected that many more will come in before the time for entries

CHAIRMAN NAMED FOR COUNTY ORGANIZATION

Local Branch of League for Women's Service Ready for Active Campaign.

Chairmen for the local organization of the League for Women's Service have been named by Mrs. Sadie Hamilton, Brownstown, chairman of the Jackson county branch, the chairmen are: Mrs. R. B. Applewhite, Brownstown; Miss Nera Hunsucker, Carr; Miss Goldie Singer, Driftwood; Miss Gertrude Doerr, Grassy Fork; Miss Lura Tinch, Hamilton; Miss Ella May, Vernon; Mrs. Allen Swope, Jackson; Mrs. Adam Fox, Redding; Mrs. Bert Tinch, Salt Creek; Mrs. Horace Payne, Owen. Especial effort will be given to securing the signatures of women to the pledge cards which are sent out by the Hoover conservation committee. The signers agree to conserve in all possible ways every article of food by having meatless and flourless days. The organization will attempt to enroll every housewife in the county in the movement.

FOOD SITUATION IN ENGLAND SATISFACTORY

More Wheat Stored There Now Than Last Year, Premier Lloyd George Asserts.

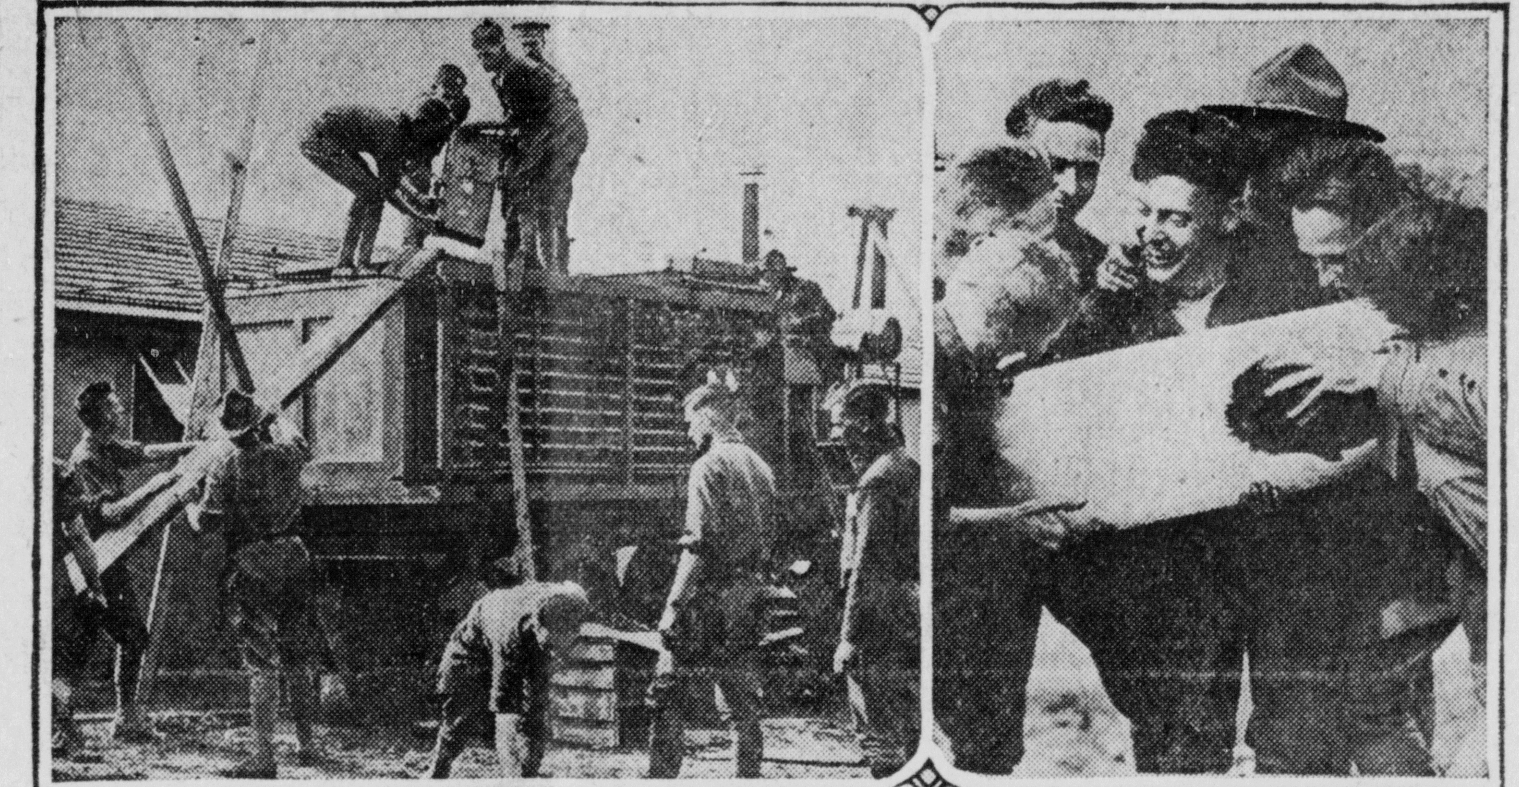

By United Press. London, August 16.—Pointed answer to German hopes of starving out England through the submarine campaign was given by Premier Lloyd George when he announced today that the food situation is now better than it has been for a long time. "The stock of wheat now in hand is 16,000,000 above that of last year," the premier told the house of commons. "England's food position is better than in many years."

MANY AFFIDAVITS FILED WITH BOARD

Registrants Claiming Exemption From Military Service Must Show Good Reasons.

MORE MEN ARE ACCEPTED

Exemption Claims Will be Taken Up After Examinations of First Group Are Completed.

Results of today's examinations will be found on page 4.

While the examination of the men who were summoned before the county exemption board is progressing, many other registrations who were found to be physically sound for military service and who claimed exemptions are filing affidavits to support their claims. Ten days are allowed after the claim for exemption is filed for the claimant to file the supporting affidavit. The process is simple, but the affidavit must be sworn to before a notary public. The blanks are given out by the board after the men have filed their claims for exemption. The local board has adopted the practice of permitting the men to file their claims after they have been examined.

The examinations are proceeding rapidly and the physicians are almost up with their schedule. Seventy men were called for each day. Only twenty-six were examined Monday as Dr. J. H. Niles, the examining physician had no assistance. Since that time Dr. J. D. Cummings, of Brownstown, Dr. N. G. Harrod, of Tampico, Dr. Heller, of Brownstown, and Dr. L. B. Hill, of this city, have been assisting in the examinations. Dr. Neal Matlock, of Medora, was appointed the reexamining physician for the entire session. The examinations are being made

GERMAN INFLUENCE SEEN IN PROPOSAL

British Press Declares Pope's Peace Plans Cannot be Accepted by Allies.

OFFICIAL TEXT MADE PUBLIC

Evacuation of Belgium is Included as One of the Basis for Ending War.

By United Press. London, August 16.—With new emphasis following publication of the official text of the peace appeal of Pope Benedict, the British press today answered "no" to his proposals for ending the war. The conditions outlined by the pope are regarded as indicating a stronger trend of German inspiration than the unofficial outline. The message as made public by the foreign office last night suggests the following principal points as conditions upon which an understanding can be reached: Guaranteeing a durable peace: Substitution of moral force of right for the material force of arms. Reciprocal reduction of armament leaving only sufficient armament for the maintenance of public order. Substitution of arbitration for armies. Each state must accept the international decision, according to established rules and be subject to punishment if refusing to submit to arbitration or accept the decision. True liberty and freedom of the seas. Restitution of all occupied territory. Evacuation of Belgium with guarantee of her full political and economic independence. The question of the Balkans, Poland and Armenia to be examined in the same spirit of equity and justice.

LARGE FIRELESS COOKER CONSTRUCTED FOR ARMY USE

Dinner Prepared for Soldiers While Enroute to Louisville from Shelbyville for Demonstration.

A fireless cooker, constructed on a large service truck by the Chambers Fireless Cooker Co., of Shelbyville, passed through the city this morning enroute to Louisville where it will be demonstrated. The cooker was designed according to special plans, made for the United States army. Four large metal tanks are constructed on the sides for the purpose of cooking large quantities of different kinds of food. Each tank will hold fifty gallons. The cooker was in operation as it passed through this city and the men in charge served dinner to several hundred soldiers upon their arrival at the Louisville camp. The inventors of the fireless cooker feel that the apparatus will not only be more convenient for army use but will be much cheaper than the present way used in preparing food. RED CROSS CALLS FOR BIG SUPPLIES

Knitted Woolen Articles in Enormous Quantities Needed to Relieve Suffering in France.

DREAD THE COMING OF WINTER

Seymour Red Cross Asked for 300 Each of Sweaters, Mufflers, Wristlets and Socks.

An urgent call has come from the Red Cross in France for large quantities of knitted woolen articles to be used in that country next winter, both for the soldiers in the trenches and for relieving suffering among the civilians. It is impossible in this country to realize how serious the situation is, especially in France which has borne the heaviest burden of the war up to this time. In addition to the soldier and civilian population Germany is sending back to France through Switzerland many refugees and others who were deported who are no longer able to serve the Germans behind the lines. These are the old, the crippled, the weak who must be cared for in their former home land. For all these people the Red Cross is seeking to aid in allaying suffering and hardships which will come next winter from exposure to the cold and freezing weather. The Seymour Chapter of the Red Cross is asked to furnish 300 sweaters, 300 mufflers, 300 pairs wristlets and 300 pairs of socks as its quota of the enormous quantity that will be required next winter. T. M. Honan, County Red Cross Chairman, received a telegram this morning from J. J. O'Connor, Director of the Central Division of the Red Cross in

LANGMARK NOW IN HANDS OF THE BRITISH FORCES

12,000 Germans Made Prisoners Taken When Town Northeast of Ypres is Taken.

By United Press. London, August 16.—Field Marshal Haig's troops captured Langmark at noon today, Premier Lloyd George announced in the house of commons. 12,000 prisoners and five guns were captured. Langmark is a little more than five miles northeast of Ypres. It is probable that both French and British troops took part in the attack which resulted in capture of the town.

Report Unconfirmed.

By United Press. Washington, August 16.—Neither the war nor navy department today had any confirmation of a report of a disaster to American troops in France. Answering a rumor that wounded Americans had been transferred to an English hospital both departments said they had received no news of any form of trouble for the Americans, but promised to make such news public as soon as it arrives, if not incompatible with the military situation.

TERRIFIC BLOW IS DEALT BY ALLIES

French and British Strike at Same Time on a Front of Six Miles in Belgium.

BOTH FORCES PUSH FORWARD

Germans Suffer Heavy Losses in Vainly Trying to Retain Hold on Lens.

By United Press. With the British Armies, August 16.—British troops swung another terrific blow against the Germans today, attacking on a front of six miles. The French struck simultaneously and at the time of cabling the forces of both nations were pushing forward with relentless fury. The British delivered their blow today northeast of Ypres, while the Germans were still staggering in bloody confusion from the assault on Lens. From opposite Polygon Wood about four and a half miles northeast of Ypres to the junction with the French line, six miles distant, the forces of Field Marshal Haig advanced after perfect preparation. The French timed their thrust to strike with that of the British. The fighting in the region of Lens was extremely bloody during the night. The Canadians crushed the Germans as they came back time and again in counter attacks. One after another German divisions came on until at 10 o'clock last night ten counter assaults had been thrown back with blood losses. The fourth German guards division was practically annihilated after others had failed to shake the Canadians' hold on Lens.

POLITICAL CHANGES IN GERMANY MAY SHORTEN WAR

President Wilson Expected to Appeal to Liberal Element to Strip Kaiserism of Power.

By United Press. Washington, August 16.—Political changes in Germany, stripping kaiserism of its powers, would shorten the war. President Wilson has appealed once to the Liberal element in Germany to cast off its yoke. That he will do so again is strongly believed here. Eventually this seed will grow and bear fruit, allied diplomats say. "Peace can only come with the realization of allied war aims," it was stated at the British embassy today. "The war can be shortened by such a political orientation in Germany that will strip kaiserism of its power." Diplomats say there must be a constructive response to the pope. That the spirit of democratization already at work in Germany must be encouraged by a hopeful word now from the United States and the allies is insisted. There must be no summary refusal which might indicate determination to thwart every peace move on the ground of German trickery, it is said.

BRITISH AND FRENCH STRIKE NORTH OF THE YPRES

Canadians Hold Positions Dominating Lens Despite Strong Enemy Counter Attacks.

By United Press. London, August 16.—Field Marshal Haig struck again to-day, this time in Belgium, north of Ypres. The British and French attacked on a wide front. Heavy fighting was reported, but progress was being made at all points in spite of stubborn resistance by the enemy, the British commander stated. The attack was on a line running to the east and north of Ypres. The Canadians to-day still held the positions dominating Lens which were taken yesterday, despite strong German counter attacks during the night. Mrs. Katie May Luckey will be hostess to the members of the Kaffee Klatch Friday afternoon at her home on North Chestnut street. This is the first meeting that the club has held for several weeks and all of the members are invited to be present.

PARIS TO HAVE SEAPORT FOLLOWING GREAT WAR

Seine May be Made Navigable for Big Ocean Going Vessels.

By United Press.

Paris, August 16.—Paris as one of the world's great seaports of the future is to-day more than an idle dream.

Ever since the 17th Century the idea of a seaport Paris has been occasionally discussed by learned Frenchmen and approved as highly advisable. But it has taken the big war to develop the plan so that today it is a potent possibility. The war has demanded the absolute necessity of providing Paris with a navigable waterway direct to the sea, so that ocean going-ships might bring their cargoes into dock at the French metropolis.

The "Paris Seaport" scheme has been handed down from generation to generation, with additions and modifications on paper. Then came the great floods of 1910 when whole quarters of Paris were inundated and traffic was suspended for days. It was then definitely decided that a canal system must be built to relieve the main stream in case of new floods and the idea of widening and deepening the Seine was also considered.

Today the Prefect of the Seine has issued circulars to the Municipal authorities, outlining a definite and new scheme for rendering the Seine navigable for big shipping from Paris to Rouen and proposing that a port be built at Genevilliers, outside of Paris, with easy access to the canal.

in accordance with the instructions. If the first physician find a registrant physically unfit for service he so notes on a blank form and the man is sent to the reexamining physician. If the second physician's report agrees with that of the first doctor the man is rejected. If the report of the second physician does not tally exactly with the first physician's findings the man is required to undergo an examination by a third physician. The opinion of two of the physicians is then accepted as final so far as the local board is concerned.

While the work is surrounded with more or less solemnity, occasionally some humorous incident will occur. The work of the board is conducted in secrecy, but despite the secrecy some of the details leak out. It is said that one man who was found to be physically sound was being examined for hearing. First one ear is tested and then the other. In testing a man's hearing he is required to place one finger against one ear and he is then questioned. This registrant had a finger to one ear and apparently was unable to hear any of the questions asked. Several sentences were spoken and he made no reply. Without changing his tone of voice, the examining physician told the man that his hearing must be defective and to try the other ear. Thoughtlessly the registrant quickly complied with the order. He was not rejected because of faulty hearing. While it may be possible for a man to "stall" on the ear and eye test, he will more than likely be discovered before the examination is completed, and several men have found that it is better to follow the rules without endeavoring to "put one over" on the board.

The Library will have on exhibit from July 18 to Sept. 8, the exhibit, "John Herron Art Institute." These are photographs of the buildings and reproductions of paintings and other works of art in the Institute.

New Books.

"The American Dramatist" by Moses presents in a single volume, a mass of data on American drama. The chapters devoted to the different dramatists are good.

"Right and Duty" by Kuenzli, formerly an officer in the Swiss army, outlines the history of Switzerland, and the Swiss system of compulsory military training, and shows that it might be effectively adapted to American conditions.

"The American Public Library" by A. E. Bostwick is a comprehensive survey of the Public Library movement in this country, describing its aims, and presenting the movements, processes and problems of Library Science.

Other books are Sonnets and Poems of Petrarch; Modern Reader's Bible, by R. G. Moulton; Jesus, the Christ in the Light of Psychology, by G. Stanley Hall.

Three army officials will be asked to join the competitive drills of the Patriarchs Militant to be held at the armory. Plans of the armory floor will be sent to the different teams that will enter in order that they might become familiar with it for the big event. A gigantic parade, known as, "25,000, Count Us" will be held on Wednesday afternoon, September 19. This promises to be the biggest feature of the meeting and it is expected that the largest crowd will be present on that day. Railroad associations have agreed on the two cent fare to Louisville from many different points and it is thought that thousands of people will take advantage of it.

A record breaking Canadian attendance is expected because of the recent issues which have bound that country and the United States more closely together.

One of the biggest social features planned for the occasion will be the military ball and reception which will be held in the armory on the evening of September 19. Twenty-five bands will be in the gigantic parade.

A meeting of the third Indiana regiment, Patriarchs Militant, will be held in the city on Sunday, September 2, to prepare for the international convention. The third regiment is made up of two Indianapolis orders, one from Noblesville and the local order.

SPECIAL SESSION OF LEGISLATURE IS PROBABLE

Governor Goodrich Asks Senator E. P. Elsner to Attend Special Meeting Friday Afternoon.

Senator Edward P. Elsner received a message from Governor James P. Goodrich this morning asking him to be present at a meeting of leading members of the state legislature for the purpose of conferring on the advisability of calling a special session. Senator Elsner will go to Indianapolis tomorrow morning to be present at the meeting.

Senator Elsner stated this morning that in his opinion a special session of legislature would be called to confer on several important matters that are needing immediate attention. One of the most important matters that will be threshed out providing a special session is called will be the coal proposition.

The meeting tomorrow will be held at the state house and Governor Goodrich has called on several of the leading members of the legislative body to be present.

Lloyd George to Give Address.

By United Press.

London, August 16.—Premier Lloyd George will deliver an important address in the house of commons this afternoon. It is believed he will make England's first official pronouncement in response to the pope's peace appeal.

The premier is to discuss the war situation, according to announcement, in connection with a motion to adjourn parliament for summer recess.

Bartholomew Quota Raised One

The quota to be raised by Bartholomew county has been increased one. The former number asked from the county was 103. The new order requires 104 men, and the registration board is arranging to make additional examinations to get the additional soldier. Only fifty-five of the three hundred men examined in that county declined to file exemption claims, and the board is now working on the exemption papers.

WILD FLOWERS CONCEAL BATTLE SCARS ON VIMEY RIDGE

Poppies, Cowslips and Corn Flowers Cover Trench Cut by Canadian Artillery Fire.

(By William Philip Simms)

United Press Staff Correspondent. With the British Armies in the Field, August 16.—Vimy Ridge is covered with flowers. A few weeks ago I watched this hill explode and blaze like the Day of Judgement while the Canadians with their artillery and mines turned it into a seething, boiling mound of fire.

Today old Lady Nature has completed her miracle. Vimy Ridge is green. Poppies, cowslips, cornflowers, purple thistle-mops, daisies and belated speedwells dash the gory battlefield with color, while rank grass hides the smaller shell-craters. But one explanation is possible for this change, for all manner of vegetation and seed were burned to ashes and buried many feet deep in the mud during the storming of Vimy's heights in April. Nature has worked some wonder as if ashamed of the ugly hill and wanted to cover it over and hide it out of sight.

Vimy Ridge runs from just west of Lens almost due south towards Arras. Notre Dame de Lorette is a great ridge running generally east and west, the eastern slopes ending west of Lens where Vimy begins.

From the top of Notre Dame, Lens can be plainly seen about four miles away. The whole flat plain to the north and northeast, is dominated by this great hill. It also dominates the south and west. Small wonder the two ridges were ordered by the German high command to be held at all costs, for so long as they were held the British and French were powerless from Arras to Ypres.

So the French stormed Notre Dame and won it. The whole ridge was drenched in blood, the ground was shattered, and it seemed that this spot would ever be barren of the slightest growing thing.

Today I found flowers everywhere. At times grass reached almost to my waist. I stumbled into abandoned trenches and comparatively recent shellholes now hidden under vegetation. Now and then one tripped over concealed entanglements of barbed wire, or kicked a skull accidentally with the toe of one's boot, or trod on some forgotten soldier's pack, or rifle or bayonet. Under rank growths of daisies one comes across strips of German uniforms with whitening bones lying about, and German boots with everything from the knee down still in them. Canteens, battered and pierced; iron-ration tins; hand grenades, shrapnel cases, cartridge clips, unexploded shells, all manner of equipment are still there—only they are now hidden under a tangle of wild flowers.

EVERY TWENTY-NINTH PERSON OWNS AN AUTO

Iowa Leads all Other States With One Machine for Every Eleven Inhabitants.

By United Press.

Washington, August 16.—With one automobile for every 11 persons in the State, Iowa led the country in 1916 in the number of motor cars per capita, according to official figures in the government office of Public Roads.

California was second with one car for every 12 inhabitants.

Nebraska and South Dakota had one for every 13. Arkansas stood last in the list of States with only one car for every 116 persons.

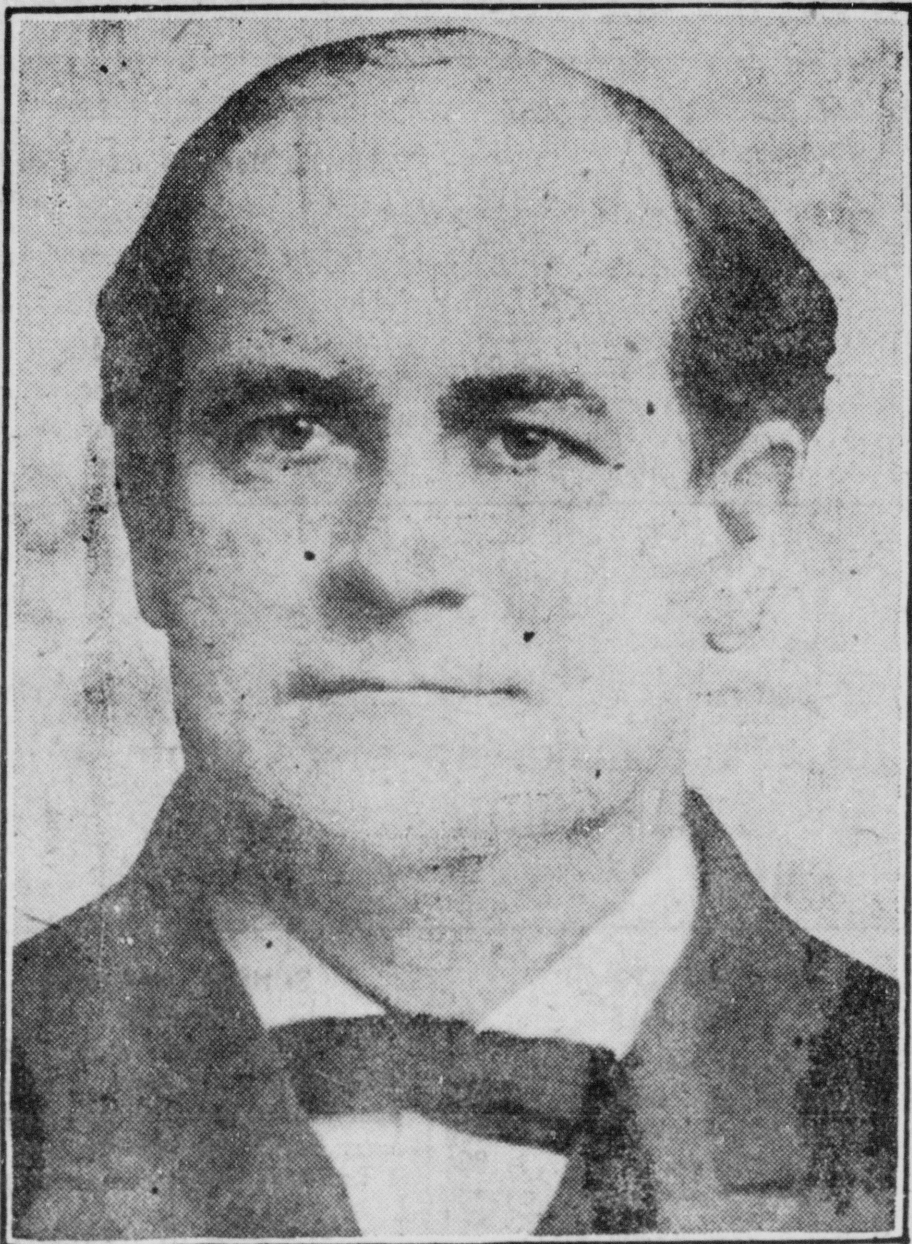

The national average was one for every twenty-nine. By sections the South had relatively the fewest cars in proportion to population.

Southern Indiana's Great Patriotic Day

Under the Auspices of the Indiana Food Conservation Commission—To be Held at

Seymour, Ind., Saturday, August 25

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

Only two of these big demonstrations are to be held in Indiana. The first was recently held at Plymouth, Ind., for the northern part of the State, and the State Food Commission has designated Seymour for the second because it is easily accessible by rail, traction and highway from all sections of Southern Indiana.

FREETOWN MAN IN U. S. SERVICE IN PANAMA

J. C. Lucas, Who Enlisted Recently, Says There Are Many Good Features of Army Life.

J. C. Lucas, of Freetown, who recently enlisted in the regular army at the local recruiting office, has written a letter to his father, Jesse D. Lucas, of Freetown, in which he gives an account of camp life. The letter follows:

Fort Grant, C. Z. Panama.
Dear Mother and Father:

I received your letter a few days ago and should have answered sooner, but we are pretty busy now and every evening when I would intend to write there would be a good show, a wrestling match or something that I would not want to miss. So here it is Sunday and if I don't write today it might be another week before I could get started.

From the way you write I suppose most all the boys dread the conscript but I think if they knew what a fine life we lead they would not wait to be conscripted but volunteer. Dad, there is as much difference in my soldier life and the life you had to lead in the sixties as there is between day and night. We have every necessity of life and quite a few luxuries; we have everything to eat in the way of good solid food a man could want. Sundays and holidays we have as good dinners as I used to have at home (almost). On the 4th of July we had a chicken dinner with oyster dressing, peas, young beans, salad, mashed potatoes, gravy, celery, ice tea, ice cream and cake and maybe you think I didn't eat.

We have a fine gymnasium, library and reading room, pool room, movie show and if I want to take a swim all I have to do is go jump in the canal. Then if I tire of all these Panama City is only one mile from the Fort and one can enjoy themselves there anyway they like.

There is one thing in the army that many men do not like, and that is discipline. But the sooner we become accustomed to it the better it is for us. There is no such thing in the army as refusing to do one's duty. Every man here has his bit to do and the one who doesn't do it is out of luck. I see men every day who are sick of the army, but nine out of ten of these are men who think they know more than their superior, men who think some one else should do their part of the work for them.

Life in the army is just what one makes it, and I intend to make the best out of it that I possibly can. I have been very lucky so far. I have never had a punishment but of course there is plenty of time and anyone is liable to make a mistake. I see by the papers that many men are putting up excuses that are very poor, trying to dodge the conscript. So far as I am concerned I would be ashamed to do a thing like that. If a man does not want to fight for his country, all right, but let him register like a man and take his chances. We all have ties at home that are hard to break but no difference how badly I hated to break them I would be game rather than put up some "foney" that would cause some other man who had honor enough to take his chance to go in my stead. What would this country be if we were all like that? Of course I am not anxious to let a "Dutch man" shoot me but it looks like some of us will have to go over and if it is my lot to go I intend to do all the damage I can. For some one has to put the Kaiser down and I believe the old U. S. A. has just what it takes to do the work.

The man who goes over and gets back will surely have had some experience worth while and then there is the chance that some of us will not get back but "we should worry," for we all have to check in some time and I cannot see a more honorable way of doing so than in the line of duty.

Well Dad I must close it it is almost time for retreat, but will write again soon. As ever your son, J. C., 3rd Co. Coast Artillery.

CURB PRICE OF FOOD STUFFS BY VARIETY OF SELECTION

Dr. H. E. Barnard Offers Another Suggestion for Reducing Down Cost of Living.

Indianapolis, August 16.—Curb the price of food stuffs by variety of selection, was the advice given today by Harry E. Barnard, Indiana food administrator, in an article written for the United Press. Buying in variety will ease the strain on the pocketbook and benefit the health, Barnard declared.

"The 'one-food' man like the 'one-idea' man may think he is following a successful plan of life," Barnard said. "In the long run his method may be expensive to him and to others. Food prices are quick to reflect on undue demand for any commodity, even a secondary one, and for that reason those who are accustomed to a variety of foodstuffs can make a better selection with a reasonable outlay of money than those to whom meat and potatoes are staples for two meals out of every three.

"A variety of foods can be obtained today at a lower cost than the same amount of food in the form of staples such as meat and potatoes. Not only will buying a variety ease the strain on the pocketbook but it will be a good thing for the health. Many persons almost selfishly follow definite diets. They must have their preferred foods even when the price is excessive. It is quite probable that they are getting no more nutrition than if they were eating a greater variety of plain, substantial and cheap foods.

"The present price of a number of food staples shows what people can do if they start out to buy a six month's supply from a market that is stocked for only two months. Housewives who try to buy for future needs are imposing a hardship upon themselves and on the merchant as well. The price of wheat, flour and sugar during the past few months furnish a very concrete example of just what happens when people over-buy.

"Buy everything you need but don't over-buy is a good slogan for purchasers in every market. There is no need of stinting one's family by putting down food purchases. The better thing to do is to get away from the idea that we are all well fed only when we are supplied with the foods to which we are most used, and to realize that careful choosing from a great variety of products on the grocers' shelves will furnish us the food elements necessary to nourish us without danger of unbalancing the diet or increasing living costs."

Prof. Walkenhorst who has been spending several weeks with relatives at Missouri has returned home. Prof. Walkenhorst is the teacher in the local German Lutheran school.

J. J. Peter and Tom Groub left last evening for Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, where they will join relatives and friends and enjoy a short camping trip.

ALLEN SWOPE, P. M.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy, is taken internally and acts thru the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Medicine fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

RECEIVES SCHOLARSHIP TO HERRON ART INSTITUTE

Miss Edris Hughes Will Attend Well Known Art School for Another Season.

Miss Edris Hughes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hughes has been awarded the scholarship given by the Indiana Federation of Women's Clubs, to the Herron Art Institute for another term, having just been notified to that effect. Miss Hughes received the scholarship last year and the fact that she was highly endorsed by the institute instructors besides the Seymour Art League, was the cause of her receiving it again over several other applicants. Her many friends in the city will be glad to know that she has been awarded the scholarship for another season.

Prof. Glen Henderson of Woodburn, was here yesterday the guest of his sister, Mrs. Walfred Lindstrom.

SEYMOUR CROWD TO ATTEND MEDORA CHAUTAUQUA FRIDAY

Number of Local Automobilists to Hear Vitale Concert Band Tomorrow Night.

A double concert of unusual merit will be given at the Medora Chautauqua Friday night when the program will be rendered by Angelo Vitale's Band with Torcom Bezazian as baritone. The program will be one of the best that has been brought to this section of the state this year and a number of local people are planning to attend.

Arrangements were under way today for the local people to meet with their automobiles at the corner of Second and Chestnut streets at 6 p. m. Friday reaching Medora in plenty of time for the concert. Arrangements have also been made for the east bound accommodation train due here about 9 o'clock to wait at Medora until after the concert has been completed. This will give local people an excellent opportunity to spend the entire day there. It is expected that this city will be largely represented in the assembly crowd at Medora Friday and especially Friday night. Vitale's Band will also give the program Friday afternoon.

The program for Saturday and Sunday follows:

SATURDAY
Afternoon—Entertainment, Theresa Sheehan Concert Co.
Evening—Popular Prelude, Theresa Sheehan Concert Co.
Lecture—"A Medley of Philosophy, Facts and Fun," Denton C. Crowl.

SUNDAY
Afternoon—Musical Prelude, Mendelssohn Sextette.
Lecture—"The Challenge of America," Hon. Chester H. Aldrich.
Evening—Grand Closing Entertainment, Mendelssohn Sextette.

Walter Greger, of Chicago, was in the city this morning enroute to Brownstown to spend several days with his mother, Mrs. A. Greger and family. He was among the drafted men in the Chicago lists and passed the examination claiming no exemption. He expects to be called about September 5.

Queen of Creams

So far this year nearly five hundred jars of Nyal Face Cream have been used in Seymour. Such indorsement speaks louder than the blasts of a brass band.

Have you tried it? Twenty-five and fifty cents. Nyal Toilet Soap has not advanced in price.

of getting the highway through the "Stone City."

The trip outlined by the Commissioners after they leave Jackson county will be through Mitchell, Bedford and French Lick, where they will spend the night. T. S. Blish, Senator Elsnor and J. H. Andrews, of this city, Dr. S. W. Shields, of Brownstown, O. W. Ernest, of Medora, and the County Commissioners will accompany the commissioners to French Lick.

The gentlemen were well pleased with the road conditions in Jackson county and are well satisfied with their decision in passing the highway through the county. In Lawrence and other counties west there remains a fight as to the route to be taken. However, Bedford boosters feel confident that they are to get the road and are working hard to that end. At Mitchell the commissioners will be met by several delegations from different cities and towns wanting to be represented on the highway. Washington, Logansport and Shoals will have several automobile loads of boosters to meet them and they will make a request that the road pass through their counties enroute to Evansville.

The commissioners will go to Evansville Friday and from there to Louisville. They will return over a portion of the north and south route and will again take up the east and west trail at North Vernon going to Lawrenceburg. Messrs. Wright and Taylor expected to be joined here by Mr. Jenkins, another member of the state highway commission but received a message at noon today stating that he could not be present.

Among those who came here to meet the commissioners and escort them over the county were: Dr. D. J. Cummings, C. T. Renton, I. N. Persinger, John E. Kieffer, George W. Gunder, of Brownstown, and H. C. McCoun and N. V. Trautman, of Medora.

W. C. T. U.

A very pleasant afternoon was spent by the W. C. T. U. in their August meeting at the home of Mrs. Oscar Carter, east of the city. After the business and devotions led by Mrs. F. Teckemeyer, the following program was rendered:

Song—"Wind the Ribbon Around the Nation"..... Union.

Paper—"The Value of My Vote".....Miss Amelia Platter.

"Facts for Busy Women"....Mrs. R. R. Short.

Reading—"A Ruling Passion".....Henry Van Dyke, by Mrs. Earl Cox.

A dainty ice course was served by the hostess and a pleasant social hour was spent.—Contributed.

WOMAN'S PAGE

At the Red Cross Workshop

The hum and buzz of sewing machines, the clip, clip, clip of scissors, the rattle of knitting needles striking together as stitch upon stitch is piled up and the babble of the voices of many women at work is this atmosphere which prevails in the workshop of the local Red Cross organization. And besides this brilliant and swaggar knitting bags are apt to be hung over a chair back or conveniently tossed on a table containing an "on the way" pair of socks or any other regulation article that the government is asking for. Women in charge of the shop who inspect the work of the volunteers are dressed as Red Cross nurses and sometimes from under the well fitting cap a bit of iron gray hair or the darker hair of a girl is seen, showing that the young as well as the old have their particular part to play in the undertaking.

While these women and girls are at work they are allowed to talk and enjoy themselves much as they would at a meeting of an ordinary sewing club. The conversation, though, usually centers itself about this work and sometimes runs something like this: "Well, I'm on my fifth row now. It won't be very long until I have this scarf finished. Let's see—It has to be 58 inches long and five rows measures just two inches. I have 54 more inches to knit, but if I work hard I can have it done by the end of the week. No, I'm not very speedy yet, but my goodness, I just learned how yesterday. You needn't say anything. You are about as slow rolling those bandages as anybody could be. Last week I worked on the bandages and made quite a record for myself,—made three in forty-five minutes. But say —have you tried to make any pajamas? They are impossible. I'd rather work on anything else. You know I have tried about everything but I am crazy about knitting. I want to learn to knit on one of these scarfs then I'm going to make a sweater for myself. I don't particularly care about them but I want to work with a pretty shade of yarn—something besides this tiresome brown—and then I want to carry one of those adorable knitting bags every place I go."

All day long these scenes go on but underneath the surface women are beginning to appreciate the seriousness of the situation. They work tirelessly and devote every possible moment of their time to either the volunteer work or the work of overseeing and inspecting the completed articles. Children who want to help and who are not able to make bandages or sew the heavier articles, work for several hours each day clipping outing flannel into very fine pieces which is used as a stuffing for surgical pillows. Others knit scarfs, and braid outing flannel into pads for the invalid chair.

All summer long children have been giving amateur theatricals for the benefit of the Red Cross and just the other day several girls about thirteen years of age decided to work for the same purpose. They will do whatever they can—wash dishes at home, run errands, etc., and with the proceeds they will purchase materials to fill a comfort kit. This costs $1.25 so it will be a rather long time and will require a great deal of work before they are in a position to have one filled. It shows though, a true spirit of patriotism and is as loyal an act as entering into actual service.

Favorite Recipes

We used to be a nation of over-eaters.

Perhaps we still eat too much most of us. Physicians still say that more persons die from overeating than from not eating enough. But any one who notes the modern breakfast will feel convinced the Americans do less overeating than they used to do.

Even twenty years ago a "heartly" breakfast was the rule. Fruit and cooked cereal, steak or chops, potatoes, hot bread, coffee and often pancakes, sometimes sliced tomatoes or cucumbers—such was the breakfast served in many homes throughout the year.

Today potatoes for breakfast are very unusual, and steaks and chops are almost as much so. The usual breakfast consists of fruit, coffee—and many persons nowadays take tea instead—toast or hot bread and an egg or bacon. Cereal is added by many persons, but many persons who take cereal omit the egg or bacon.

Luncheon, too, are much lighter than they used to be. And here are some receipts to help with these same lighter luncheons—receipts for dishes that are at once satisfying and nourishing and appetizing without being too heavy. Many of them are substitutes for meat. Yet they may well form "the piece de resistance" of the luncheon.

The Real Thing.

This dashing garment, a combination of cape and jacket, comes in seal, contrasted with wide bands of chinchilla. Tab fronts and a fur belt are almost as striking as the immense roll collar.

NUT ROAST

Nuts have high nutritive value and form a very satisfactory meat substitute for luncheon. A nut-roast is particularly satisfying. To make one that is delicious, mix well two cupfuls of finely chopped nut-meats, three cupfuls of bread crumbs, two well-beaten eggs and half a cupful of white sauce. Add pepper and salt to season and form into a roll. Cover with strips of bacon and roll in cracker crumbs and bake in a hot oven for fifteen minutes. Serve with tomato sauce or a brown gravy.

MACARONI TIMBALES

Macaroni is another nourishing and satisfying substitute for meat. Macaroni timbales are prepared in this way: Break the macaroni in inch lengths and put it over the fire in cold water. Bring to the boiling point and simmer until tender. Drain and mix immediately with a little butter. Then add grated cheese to taste and an egg, beaten, to every pint of macaroni. Cool and press into a buttered bowl, leaving a cavity in the center. Fill this with chopped ham and chicken or lamb. Cover with more macaroni, bake until brown, turn from the mold and serve.

MACARONI AU GRATIN

Macaroni au gratin, ordinary dish though it be, is a delicacy and many cooks do not prepare it as well as it can be prepared. The best way to cook macaroni is in cold water, simmering until tender. It should then immediately be drained and mixed with a little butter to keep the pieces from sticking together. Then it should be turned into a flat buttered dish and sprinkled with melted butter, grated cheese, bread crumbs, pepper and salt, and baked until the crumbs are just brown and the cheese is melted.

BEAN LOAF

Beans of all kinds have high food value and a loaf can be formed of the kidney beans. Cook the beans and measure a pint. Add half a pound of grated dry cheese and a cupful of bread crumbs. Salt to taste and form into a loaf. Bake, basting with meat stock or with melted butter and water. Serve with cream sauce or tomato sauce.

RICE LOAF

Rice loaf is another standby for luncheon dishes. A very delicious loaf is made from a cupful of shopped hickory nuts and two of boiled rice, mixed with a beaten egg, rolled into a loaf, then rolled in egg and crumbs and baked for twenty-five minutes. This is deliciously served with tomato sauce. A very good and easy way to make tomato sauce is to simmer a can of tomatoes until it measures only about half the orig-

Favorites for Blouses for Midsummer

The shops continue to display blouses—tailored and otherwise made—for late summer wear. Tailored models are of crepe de chine and other wash silks, while Georgette crepe holds its own first place for dressy wear. The lingerie blouses of fine white voile, trimmed with narrow flit, cluny or lingerie lace, and further ornamented with fine touches—used sparingly—gains ground as midsummer wears. This is a favorite worn with white wash skirts and with other separate skirts for the street and sports. It launders to perfection, and the silk blouses do almost as well, with careful washing.

A blouse of white pussy willow taffeta is one of the few tailored models which is not uncompromisingly plain. It has a very simple pattern in the front wrought in all white and blue beads. Except for this it is entirely plain, relying upon its style upon a wide sailor collar and deep pointed cuffs turned back at the wrists.

In the blouse of Georgette narrow revers at the front widen into a collar that is deep at the back and edged with narrow flit lace. Fine tucks, in two seams to the line of the bust and a dainty pattern in silk embroidery finishes the decoration. The sleeves are gathered into deep plain cuffs and all seams are hemstitched.

Among new arrivals there are a few blouses that fasten in the back. They are provided with high collars and jabots and are a boon to the too-slender woman. But blouses like those pictured, with open throats, are worn with separate high collars and jabots.

The Bersaglieri.

This soldierly hat is fashioned of black velvet, dashing topped with a Spanish coque feather, set as the Italians wear them, and strapped with handsome gold braid, just like an Italian officer's cap.

inal quantity. Then season with butter, pepper and salt, strain, add a very little cornstarch—not more than a quarter of a teaspoonful—boil up and serve. Another way to make a quick tomato sauce is to heat the contents of a can of concentrated tomato soup without adding any water.

DRIED BEEF CREAMED

Creamed dried beef can be delicious if it is properly cooked. To do this, cover it with cold water and let it very gradually become hot—on the back of a coal stove or in the open door of a gas stove oven. When the slices of meat have increased in size from absorbing the water, drain it off and cover the beef with a thick white sauce. This is delicious served with boiled potatoes, broken open and sent to the table with a tablespoonful of tomato catsup and a teaspoonful of butter in each.

BAKED BEANS

Ordinary baked beans can be cooked in such a way that they form a delicious luncheon dish. Look over a quart of them and discard any that are not perfect. Soak in cold water for twelve hours. Drain, cover with cold water and simmer until they are just tender, but not broken.

Autumn's Furs.

Scotch moleskin in voluminous stole and a melon muff here adds the chic to a battleship gray suit of broadcloth. The stole fastens carelessly with satin ribbon tie-ends in a big bow afront.

Rapid boiling instead of simmering will break them quickly, so be sure about the simmering. Put them in a deep crock, with a tablespoonful of molasses or a cupful of tomato sauce or four tablespoonfuls of tomato catsup. With the molasses or catsup some of the water in which they are simmered will be needed. Cook slowly in the oven for two or three hours. Add some of the water in which they were cooked as it is needed to keep them moist. Then pour into a shallow dish and brown in the oven.

SALMON CROQUETTES.

The various canned fishes are good for luncheon and they can be served in many ways. Creamed salmon or lobster, shrimp or salmon or lobster croquettes, escalloped salmon and any of them served in a mayonnaise salad are delicious. To make salmon croquettes, measure two cupfuls of the salmon, mince it and add a cupful of white sauce, thickened with a tablespoonful of flour. Add also two beaten eggs, salt and pepper, a tablespoonful of cracker crumbs and form into croquettes. Chill, roll in egg and crumbs and fry in hot fat. Serve with white sauce and parsley or with lemon slices and parsley.

What Some Women Are Doing

The way that the women of America have shown their patriotism during this war time by taking hold and managing committees and organizations of the Red Cross and the Conservation of Food has shown what really unusual things could be accomplished when the occasion demanded. This patriotism has shown its effect in many ways and it is believed that the women of this country will take the places of men to an even greater extent than in England. In many places they are already working on railroads, in all branches except the actual operation of the trains; they have accepted clerical positions; they are working on farms, and in short are doing just what seems the most important thing to be done. While these openings cannot be filled by everyone, in many cases women and girls are doing other things in unusual ways to help along as much as it is possible.

A case of this sort was published in the Indianapolis News not long ago. A girl seventeen years old, of a wealthy family living on North Meridian street has during this spring and summer earned enough money to support a Belgian war orphan for a year. And the way she did it could be done in hundreds of other cases if the people had the same amount of interest and were willing to work as hard. Every morning, since the weather was warm enough to start the summer garden this girl got up at five o'clock walked to her garden patch and cultivated it for at least two hours. As soon as the vegetables were ripe enough to be picked they were sold to the grocery stores, to the neighbors or to anyone who would buy them and the proceeds were turned over to the Belgian Relief Fund. Just now her later varieties of garden products are ready to be sold and with the entire amount it will be sufficient to support one of the orphans for a year.

Another case which shows what the women are willing to sacrifice is that of Miss Alice Van Hise, the daughter of President Van Hise of the University of Wisconsin. Miss Van Hise is spending her summer vacation working in the pea cannery taking this means of aiding in the conservation of food. In the morning she reports for work at 7:30, dressed in dark gingham which is covered by a slip-on rubber apron. She works until six in the evening, running and labeling the cans after they are sealed and ready for the market. With the money she earns she is helping the Red Cross organization by buying the contents for the soldier comfort kits.

Day after day we hear many similar cases, some working independently of any organization and others supporting Red Cross chapters, Food Conservation committees and Councils of Defense. Within our own county a great deal of work has been accomplished in this way and almost everyone has found enough time to do some sort of patriotic work during this summer. The women who are employed, and cannot give the time to sewing or preserving food are aiding the organizations with money and in this way are doing their bit. Many women purchased Liberty Bonds and are right now working to earn the money to pay for them.

Margaret Mason's Fashion Letter

(Written for the United Press)

You really can't do better than can these days. Can all you can and everything you can but if you can't of course why then the next best thing is just to mind your knitting.

Canning has not only become the favorite occupation but the favorite recreation. When the Tired Business Man gets home at night to the bosom of his family and asks said bosom what she has been doing all day, not that he cares or even listens to her answer, he is due these days for the surprise of his tired business life.

In the olden times of course he was safe to count on one of three answers, bridge, dancing or movies. Now when little Bright Eyes comes back at him with the startling announcement that she has been canning the strange sound of the word penetrates even a brain all emersed in war and baseball news and he gets all muddled up as to whether the Russians revolted this afternoon or the Germans are going to win the World Series. Then when she leads him proudly to the rows of gooseberries and a sextet of glasses of currant and raspberry jelly he's so pleased and happy that he kisses her right by the jelly and ten to one takes her out to the theatre as a reward of merit.

So you see it certainly pays to can. Nowadays there are such fascinating aids to preserving and pickling, too. Gummed labels ready to stick on the outside of your finished products come ready printed in blue, black, green or red to suit any fruity color scheme. Some of them more ornate have garlands of fruits, designated by the label, around the border in lifelike colorings. Disks of gummed paper, hand colored in the respective fruits, come also to fit on top of the glass or jar over the paraffine. Some ultra artists in pickles and jellies even may go so far as to sign each delectable masterpiece with a tiny gummed label bearing their monogram.

As for the variety of glasses and jars they are irresistible. Glasses for jellies are fluted or plain with a design in the bottom of the glass only which stands out in beautiful relief when the successfully jellied jelly is turned out in all its amber of crimson perfection.

Most adorable little jars of cream, grey, or blue and white stone come in tempting shapes for marmalades and jams and the bigger stone crocks and jars for pickles and preserves make excellent natural back grounds for a variety of gay colored labels.

Not all the charming labels or quaint shaped receptacles for the outside will help you however if the inside isn't all it should be.

It is a crushing blow to spend a hot afternoon and lots of money for high-cost-of-living sugar and fruit, only to have the final results a sticky mass. If you cook your fruit the least bit too long or pick it the least bit too ripe or start on the job on a day that is the least bit too cloudy and dark, then it is all off and you may as well put up your jelly in bottles as the canning jars you have all sterilized and ready for it.

If you're lucky and the atmosphere and everything is just right, however, your success with plain jellies and jams will lead you on into wonderful realms of fascinating concoctions and combinations. Arrays of shining jars and glasses will then eventually pack your storeroom shelves with such delectable delicacies as pickled cherries, pickled and brandied peaches, spiced currants, spiced gooseberry, pineapple and strawberry conserve, quince honey, plum and walnut conserve and heaps more that I don't care to mention because my typewriter is beginning to drool at the keys.

Besides it smells as if my watermelon preserves have simmered long enough anyway so pardon me, won't you? And remember that she who cans is canny.

CHAPTER III.

The Holy Yhiorides.

George drank his burgundy perfumingly. Had it been astringent as the native wine of Corsica, he would not have noticed it. The little nerves that ran from his tongue to his brain had temporarily lost the power of communication. And all because of the girl across the way. He couldn't keep his eyes from wandering in her direction. She faced him diagonally. She ate but little, and when the elderly gentleman poured out for her a glass of sauterne, she motioned it aside, rested her chin upon her folded hands, and stared not at but through her vis-a-vis.

It was a lovely head, topped with coils of lustrous, light brown hair; an oval face, of white and rose and ivory tones; scarlet lips, a small, regular nose, and a chin the soft roundness of which hid the resolute lift to it. To these attributes of loveliness was added a perfect form, the long, flowing curves of youth, not the abrupt contours of maturity. George couldn't recollect when he had been so impressed by a face. From the moment she had stepped down from the carriage, his interest had been drawn, and had grown to such dimensions that when he entered the dining-room his glance immediately searched for her table. What luck in finding her across the way! He questioned if he had ever seen her before. There was something familiar; the delicate profile stirred some sleeping memory but did not wake it.

How to meet her, and when he did meet her, how to interest her? If she would only drop her handkerchief, her purse, something to give him an excuse, an opening. Ah, he was certain that this time the hydra-headed one should not overcome him. To gain her attention and to hold it, he would have faced a lion, a tiger, a wild elephant. To diagnose these symptoms might not be fair to George. "Love at first sight" reads well and sounds well, but we hoary-headed philosophers know that the phrase is only poetical license.

Once, and only once, she looked in his direction. It swept over him with the chill of a winter wind that he meant as much to her as a fee, a fence, a meadow, as seen from the window of a speeding railway train. But this observation, transient as it was, left with him the indelible impression that her eyes were the saddest he had ever seen. Why? Why should a young and beautiful girl have eyes like that? It could not mean physical weariness, else the face would in some way have expressed it. The elderly man appeared to do his best to animate her; he was kindly and courteous and by the gentle way he laughed at intervals was trying to bolster up the situation with a jest or two. The girl never so much as smiled, or shrugged her shoulders; she was as responsive to these overtures as marble would have been.

George's romance gathered itself for a flight. Perhaps it was love thwarted and the gentleman with the mustache and imperial, in spite of his amiability, might be the ogre. Perhaps it was love and duty. Perhaps her lover had gone down to sea. Perhaps (for lovers are known to do such things) he had run away with the other girl. If that was the case, George did not think highly of that tentative gentleman's taste. Perhaps and perhaps again; but George might have gone on perishing till the crack o' doom, with never a solitary glimmer of the true state of the girl's mind. Whenever he saw an unknown man or woman who attracted his attention, he never could resist the impulse to invent a romance that might apply.

Immediately after dessert the two rose; and George, finding that nothing more important than a pineapple ice detained him, got up and followed. Mr. Ryanne almost trod on his heels as they went through the doorway into the cosy lounging-room. George dropped into a vacant divan and waited for his cafe a la Turque. Mr. Ryanne walked over to the headporter's bureau and asked if that gentleman would be so kind as to point out Mr. George P. A. Jones, if he were anywhere in sight. He thoughtfully, not to say regretfully, laid down a small bribe.

"Mr. Jones?" The porter knew Mr. Jones very well. He was generous, and treated the servants as though they were really human beings. Mr. Ryanne, either by his inquiry or as the result of his bribe, went up several degrees in the porter's estimation. "Mr. Jones is over there, on the divan by the door."

"Thanks." But Ryanne did not then seek the young man. He studied the quarry from a diplomatic distance. No; there was nothing to indicate that George Percival Algernon Jones was in any way handicapped by his Arthuresque middle names.

"No fool, as Gioconda in her infinite wisdom hath said; but romantic, terribly romantic, yet, like the timid bath who puts a foot into the water, finds it cold, and withdraws it. It will all depend upon whether he is a real collector or merely a buyer of rugs. Forward, then, Horace; a sovereign has already dashed headlong down the far horizon." The curse of speaking his thoughts aloud did not lie heavily upon him tonight, for these cogitations were made in silence, unmarked by any facial expression. He proceeded across the room and sat down beside George. "I beg your pardon," he began, "but are you not Mr. Jones?"

Mildly astonished, George signified that he was. "George P. A. Jones?" George nodded again, but with some heat in his cheeks. "Yes. What is it?" The girl had just finished her coffee and was going away. Hang this fellow! What did he want at this moment?

If Ryanne saw that he was too much, as the French say, he also perceived the cause. The desire to shake George till his teeth rattled was instantly overcome. She hadn't seen him, and for this he was grateful. "You are interested in rugs? I mean old ones, rare ones, rugs that are bought once and seldom if ever sold again."

"Why, yes. That's my business." George had no silly ideas about trade. He had never posed as a gentleman's son in the sense that it meant idleness.

Ryanne presented his card. "How do you pronounce it?" asked George naively.

"As they do in Cork." "I never saw it spelled that way before."

"Nothing surprising in that," replied Ryanne. "No one else has, either."

"You see, Ryan is as good a name as they make them; but it classes with prize-fighters, politicians and bar chemists. The two extra letters put the finishing touch to the name. A jewel is all right, but what tells is the way you hang it round your neck. To me, those additional letters represent the jewel Ryan in the hands of a Lalique."

"You talk like an American." "I am; three generations. What's the matter?" with sudden concern.

George was frowning. "Haven't I met you somewhere before?"

"Not to my recollection." A speculative frown now marred Ryanne's forehead. It did not illustrate a search in his memory for such a casualty as the meeting of George. He never forgot a face and certainly did not remember George's. Rather, the frown had its source in the mild dread that Percival Algernon had seen him somewhere during one of those indispositions of the morning after. "No; I think you have made a mistake."

"Likely enough. It just struck me that you looked something like a chap named Wadsworth, who was half-back on the varsity, when I entered my freshman year."

"A university man? Lord, no! I was turned loose at ten; been hustling ever since." Ryanne spoke easily, not a tremor in his voice, although he had received a slight mental jolt. "No; no college record here. But I want to chat with you about rugs. I've heard of you, indirectly."

"From the carpet fellows? We do a big business over here. What have you got?"

"Well, I've a rug up in my room I'd like to show you. I want your judgment for one thing. Will you do me the favor?"

Since the girl had disappeared and with her those imaginary appurtenances that had for a space transformed the lounging-room into a stage, George saw again with normal vision that the room was simply a common meeting-ground for well-dressed persons and ill-dressed persons, of the unimpeachable, the impeccable, the doubtful and the peccant; for in Cairo, as in ancient Egypt, there is every class and kind of humans, for whom the Decalogue was written, transcribed, and shattered by the turbulent Moses, an incident more or less forgotten these days. From the fall of his eye he gave swift scrutiny to his chance acquaintance, and he found nothing to warrant suspicion. It was not an unusual procedure for men to hunt him up in Cairo, in Constantinople, in Smyrna, or in any of the Oriental cities where his business itinerary led him. The house of Mortimer & Jones was widely known. This man Ryanne might have been anywhere between thirty and forty. He was tall, well set up, blond and smooth-skinned. True, he appeared to have been ill-fed recently. A little more flesh under the cheekbones, a touch of color, and the Irishman would have been a handsome man. George could read a rug a league off, as they say, but he was a child in the matter of physiognomy, whereas Ryanne was a past-master in this regard; it was necessary both for his business and safety.

"Certainly, I'll take a look at it. But I tell you frankly," went on George, "that to interest me it's got to be a very old one. You see, it's a little fad of mine, outside the business end of it. I'm crazy over real rugs, and I know something about every rare one in existence, or known to exist. Is it a copy?"

"No. I'll tell you more about it when we get to my room."

"Come on, then." George was now quite willing to discuss rugs and carpets.

Having gained the room, Ryanne threw off his coat and relighted his cigar, which, in a saving mood, he had allowed to go out. He motioned George to be seated.

"Just a little yarn before I show you the rug. See these cuffs?"

"Yes."

"You will observe that I have had to reverse them. Note this collar? Same thing. Trousers-hems a bit frayed, coat shiny at the elbows." Ryanne exhibited his sole fortune.

"Four sovereigns between me and a jail." George became thoughtful. He was generous and kind-hearted among those he knew intimately or slightly, but he had the instinctive reserve of the seasoned traveler in cases like this. He waited.

"The truth is, I'm all but done for. And if I fail to strike a bargain here with you. . . . Well, I should hate to tell you the result. Our consul would have to furnish me passage home. Were you ever up against it to the extent of reversing your cuffs and turning your collars? You don't know what life is, then."

George gravely produced two good cigars and offered one to his host. There was an absence of sound, broken presently by the cheerful crackle of matches; two billowing clouds of smoke floated outward and upward. Ryanne sighed. Here was a cigar one could not purchase in all the length and breadth of the Orient, a Pedro Murias. In one of his doubtfully prosperous epochs he had smoked them daily. How long ago had that been?

"Yonder is a rug, a prayer-rug, as holy to the Moslem as the idol's eye is to the Hindu, as the Bible is to the Christian. For hundreds of years it never saw the outside of the Sultan's palace. One day the late, the recently late, Abdul the Unspeaking Turk, gave it to the Pasha of Bagdad. Whenever this rug makes its appearance in Holy Mecca, it is worshipped, and none but a Sultan or a Sultan's favorite may kneel upon it. Bagdad, the hundred mosques, the old capital of Suleiman the Great, the dreary Tigris and the sluggish Euphrates, a muezzin from the turret calls to prayer, and all that; eh?"

George leaned forward from his chair, a gentle terror in his heart. "The Yhiorides? By Jove! is that the Yhiorides?"

Admiration kindled in Ryanne's eyes. To have hit the bull's-eye with so free and quick an aim was ample proof that Percival Algernon had not boasted when he said that he knew something about rugs.

"You've guessed it."

"How did you come by it?" George demanded excitedly.

"Why do you ask that?" "Man, ten-thousand pounds could not purchase that rug, that bit of carpet. Collectors from every port have been after it in vain. And you mean to tell me that it lies there, wrapped in butcher's paper?"

"Right-O!"

Ryanne solemnly detached a cuff and rolled up his sleeve. The bare muscular arm was scarred by two long, ugly knife-wounds, scarcely healed. Next he drew up a trousers-leg, disclosing a battered shin. "And there's another on my shoulder-blade, the closest call I ever had. A man who takes his life in his hands, as I have done, merits some reward. Mr. Jones, I'll be frank with you. I am a kind of derelict. Since I was a boy, I have hated the humdrum of offices, of shops. I wanted to be my own man, to go and come as I pleased. To do this and live meant precarious exploits. This rug represents one of them. I am telling you the family secret; I am showing you the skeleton in the closet, confidentially. I stole that rug; and when I say that the seven labors of our old friend Hercules were simple diversions compared, you'll recognize the difficulties I had to overcome. You know something of the Oriental mind. I handled the job alone. I may not be out of the jungle yet."

George listened entranced. He could readily construct the scenes through which this adventurer had gone; the watchful nights, the untiring patience, the thirst, the hunger, the heat. And yet, he could hardly believe. He was a trifle skeptical. Many a rogue had made the mistake of playing George's age against his experience. He had made some serious blunders in the early stages of the business, however; and everybody, to gain something in the end, must lose something at the start.

"If that rug is the one I have in mind, you certainly have stolen it. And if it's a copy, I'll tell you quickly enough."

"That's fair. And that's why," Ryanne declared, "I wanted you to look at it. To me, considering what I have gone through to get it, to me it is the genuine carpet. To your expert eye it may be only a fine copy. I know this much, that rare rugs and paintings have many copies, and that some one is being hooked, sold, bamboozled, sandbagged, every day in the week. If this is the real article, I want you to take it off my hands," the adventurer finished pleasantly.

"There will be a hue and cry."

"No doubt of it."

"And the devil's own job to get it out of Egypt." These were set phrases of the expert, preliminaries to bargaining. "One might as well carry round a stolen elephant."

"But a man who is as familiar with the game as you are would have little difficulty. Your integrity is an established fact, on both sides of the water. You could take it to New York as a copy, and no appraiser would know the difference. It's worth the attempt. I'd take it to New York myself, but you see, I am flat broke. Come; what do you or I care about a son-of-a-gun of a Turk?" drolly.

"What do you want for it, supposing it's genuine?" George's throat was dry and his voice harsh. His conscience roused herself, feebly, for it had been a long time since occasion had necessitated her presence.

Ryanne narrowed his eyes, carefully balancing the possibilities. "Say, one thousand pounds. It is like giving it away. But when the devil drives, you know. It is beyond any set price; it is worth what any collector is willing to pay for it. I believe I know the kind of man you are, Mr. Jones, and that is why, when I learned you were in Cairo, I came directly to you. You would never sell this rug. No. You would become like a miser over his gold. You would keep it with your emeralds (I have heard about them, too); draw the curtains, lock the doors, whenever you looked at it. Eh? You would love it for its own sake, and not because it is worth so many thousand pounds. You are sailing in a few days; that will help. The Pasha is in Constantinople, and it will be three or four weeks before he hears of the theft, or the cost," with a certain grimness.

"You haven't killed any one?" whispered George.

"I don't know; perhaps. Christianity against paganism; the Occidental conscience permits it." Ryanne made a gesture to indicate that he would submit to whatever moral arraignment Mr. Jones deemed advisable to make.

But George made none. He rose hastily, sought his knife and, without so much as by your leave, slashed the twine, flung aside the paper, and threw the rug across the counterpane. It was the Yhiorides. There was not the slightest doubt in his mind. He had heard it described, he had seen a photograph of it, he knew its history and, most vital of all, he owned a good copy of it.

Against temptation that was robust and energetic and alluring (like the man who insists upon your having a drink when you want it and ought not to have it), what chance had conscience, grown innocuous in the long period of the young man's good behavior? Collectors are always honest before and after that moment arrives when they want something desperately; and George was no more saintly than his kind. And how deep Ryanne and his confederates had delved into human nature, how well they could read and judge it, was made manifest in this moment of George's moral relapse.

Bagdad, the Jinns, Sinbad, the Thousand and One Nights, Alibaba and the Forty Thieves; George was transported mentally to that magic city, standing between the Tigris and the Euphrates, in all its white glory of a thousand years gone. Ryanne, the room and its furnishings, all had vanished, all save the exquisite fabric patterned out of wool and cotton and knotted with that mingling love and skill and patience the world knows no more. He let his hand stray over it. How many knees had pressed its thick phant substance? How many strange scenes had it mutely witnessed, scenes of beauty, of terror? It shone under the light like the hide of a healthy hound.

The nerves of a smoker are generally made apparent by the rapidity of his exhalations. These two, in the several minutes, had filled the room with a thick, blue haze; and through this the elder man eyed the younger. The sign of the wolf gleamed in his eyes, but without animosity, modified as it was by the half-friendly, half-cynical smile.

"I'll risk it," said George finally, having stepped off the magical carpet, as it were. "I can't give you a thousand pounds tonight. I can give you three hundred, and the balance tomorrow, between ten and eleven, at Cook's."

"That will be agreeable to me."

George passed over all the available cash he had, rolled up the treasure and tucked it under his arm. That somewhere in the world was a true believer, waiting and beating his breast and calling down from Allah curses upon the glauze, the dog of an infidel, who had done this thing, disturbed George not in the least.

"I say," as he opened the door, "you must tell me all about the adventure. It must have been a thriller."

"It was," replied Ryanne. "The story will keep. Later, if you care to hear it."

"Of course," added George, moved by a discretionary thought, "this transaction is just between you and me."

"You may lay odds on that," heartily. "Well, good night. See you at Cook's in the morning."

"Good night," George passed down the corridor to the adjoining room.

And now, bang! goes Pandora's box.

SOCIAL EVENTS

BIRTHDAY PARTY

In honor of her ninth birthday anniversary Miss Jeanette Clark was hostess to a company of friends at an informal afternoon party Wednesday at her home, corner Seventh and Chestnut streets. Games provided the diversion and concluding the afternoon a dainty luncheon, the ices being in moulds of animals was served. The guests included Misses Venice Rader, Minerva Smith, Gladys Ficken, Virginia Hoadley, Alice Cobb, Beatrice Hope, Katherine McDonald, Helen Crabb, Mary Fettig, Margaret Sumner, Mary Brown, Deloras Elsner, Ruth Humes, Alma Bell Charles, Morine Carter, Mary Elizabeth Cordes, Frances and Helen Mercer, Agnes Andrews, Matilda Kessler, Margaret Hopewell. An out-of-town guest was Miss May Rider, of Crothersville.

MISSIONARY MEETING.

Mrs. J. B. Hill, Mrs. J. T. Barnes, Mrs. J. H. Buhner and Mrs. David Rich were hostesses to members of the Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, entertaining this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Hill, corner Second and Poplar streets. Mrs. John Buhner was leader and developed an interesting talk on the "Advance in Spanish America." During the afternoon the articles which have been prepared by the members of the society for the missionary box to be sent to foreign missions were exhibited. At the close of the afternoon an informal reception was held.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. William Brockhoff was hostess at an attractive party this afternoon at her home on South Bill street, entertaining for her daughter, Wilma, who celebrated her eighth birthday anniversary today. Novel games were arranged for the entertainment of the guests and at the close of the afternoon a two course luncheon was served. The luncheon table was beautifully arranged with summer garden flowers combined with the patriotic colors, and miniature silk American flags were the favors. Among the guests were Florence and Helen Blain, Arthur Vogel, Earl Cox, Leotte and Mary Spurling, Oscar and Lucille Jerrell, Frieda Breitfield, Doris Wilson, Elma and Elbert Sweet and Wilma Brockhoff.

EPWORTH LEAGUE SOCIAL.

The members of the Epworth League of the German Methodist church were delightfully entertained with a lawn social Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Livensparger, on South O'Brien street. Numerous Japanese lanterns and colored electric lights were stretched over the lawn forming a color motif of Dresden colorings. The evening was spent informally, the diversion being games, and music. Concluding the evening a dainty ice course was served.

JUNIOR SEWING CLUB.

Misses Erma and Elma Stark were hostesses to members of the Junior Girls' Sewing Club, entertaining this afternoon at their home on South Broadway street. The afternoon was spent in a delightfully informal manner and at the conclusion a luncheon was served.

INFORMAL DANCE

The members of the Wide Awake Club entertained with an attractively appointed informal dance Wednesday evening at the club rooms of the Brownstown dancing club. The guests included about eight couples and the affair was among the prettiest of the dances to be given by the club this season.

ENTERTAIN AT DINNER

Mr. and Mrs. Travis Carter will entertain at six o'clock dinner this evening at their home on Indianapolis avenue, Mr. and Mrs. Byford Cunningham and their two guests, Misses Alice Miller and Sarah Nelson, of Harrodsburg, Ky., and Miss Bertha Hazzard, of Scottsburg.

CATHOLIC AID SOCIETY.

The fortnightly meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Catholic church was held this afternoon at the K. of C. Hall. The time was spent with sewing for the Red Cross and at the close of the afternoon a luncheon was served.

MID SUMMER DANCE

The members of the Bachelor's Club are arranging for the fourth of a series of mid-summer dances to be given next Tuesday evening at the Elks hall.

RED CROSS CALLS FOR BIG SUPPLIES

which Major Murphy's cablegram about conditions in France is quoted.

The following is the telegram received by Mr. Honan:

Chicago, August 15, 1917.
Mr. Thos. M. Honan, Chairman Jackson Chapter American Red Cross, Seymour, Ind.

The Red Cross has an urgent call from Major Grayson Murphy for enormous quantities of knitted woolen articles for use in France next winter. Here is cablegram from Major Murphy:

"Last winter broke the record for cold and misery among people here. We all inexpressibly dread the coming winter, finding us without supplies to meet situation. We urge you on behalf of our soldiers and those of our allies who will suffer in their frozen trenches, and also on behalf of thousands of French and Belgian refugees and repatriates being returned through Switzerland to France. Everyone here looks to America. Begin shipping at once one million five hundred thousand each of warm knitted woolen articles already requested. They must come before cold weather, and in view of shortage of fuel and other discomforts they will be of incredible value in both military and civilian work."

We ask your chapter to furnish a definite number of this requirement. Your allotment is 300 sweaters, 300 mufflers, 300 pairs wristlets, 300 pairs socks. Full instructions will follow. Ask your members to finish all knitting work now on hand and clear the deck for action. We want every chapter to have a chance to do its part in making good on this call for help from France.

As Chapter Chairman, you are requested to place a copy of the foregoing part of this message including cablegram from Major Murphy in hands of all newspapers with request to give full publicity to this first call. Then get knitting committees together and have them line up for rush job.

Director Central Division American Red Cross.
